The best place to begin is in the Airstream archives - a treasure trove of information about all things Airstream, including the origins of the Argosy line. The story goes that in the early 1970s Airstream wanted to offer a medium-priced trailer. Airstream's then-president Chuck Manchester saw the solution in a separate line of trailers sharing some of Airstream's time-tested features ...

Argosy: A short history of the painted Airstream | Airstream

The Airstream Argosy also experimented with "Minuet" models, which were much lighter an designed to be towed by cars. The Minuets were a foot narrower and the first years even had aluminum floors and partitions. They were made from 1977-1979 and had 3 different sizes - the 6.0 Metre (20?), 6.7 Metre (22?), and 7.4 Metre (24?) Minuet.

The Argosy features an aerodynamic, monocoque configuration. The aerodynamic body design minimizes wind resistance thus the Argosy is remarkably easier to tow than square type trailers. A Square type trailer requires more horsepower to overcome air drag resistance while the aerodynamic Argosy requires substantially less.

1973 Airstream Argosy 22 - Tennessee,

Although owned and sold by Airstream, Argosy was produced in a separate manufacturing plant in Versailles, Ohio, a tiny village about 35 miles from the Airstream Mothership in Jackson Center, Ohio. Argosy was created as a mid-price brand to compliment the premium Airstream brand and open up the product line to a wider market.
